Image report

The `img` elements of the page are shown below categorized by their type of textual alternative. Please review that the images in each group match that group's definition.

Images with textual alternative

The following images have textual alternatives. Please review that the textual alternatives make sense considering the purpose of the image in the context of the page and that phrases like "Image of …" are avoided.

Note that iconic images that are redundant with text next to them or purely decorative should have `alt=""` instead.

provenance.↵

93.   Affirming the divinely inspired nature of the whole Bible, the discipline of biblical theology attempts to explain how this remarkable anthology of religious texts conveys a unified theological message.↵

94.   Responding to those who dismiss the idea of a single theology that encompasses the entire Bible, advocates of biblical theology focus on the coherence of the biblical story of redemptive history.

95.   Biblical theology explores the relationship between the Old and New Testaments by drawing on such concepts as promise-fulfilment and typology.

96.   ↵

97.   The expression "biblical theology" is used in a variety of ways. Some modern writers employ it to denote any theological interpretation of a biblical text, ↵

98.   but traditionally "biblical theology" refers to "the overall theological message of the whole Bible.↵

99.   "1 This latter understanding presupposes that the books that comprise the Bible are sufficiently unified that together they provide a coherent theology.

100.   ↵

101.   We often think of the Bible as a single book, but it is actually an anthology of shorter religious writings that were composed in different languages ↵

102.   by different authors using different literary genres over many centuries.↵

103.   The very nature of the Bible presents an immediate challenge for those who contend that it has a unified theological outlook. ↵

104.   Yet, it is the Bible's own testimony that although different human authors composed these writings, they were so influenced ↵

105.   by God that the whole collection of writings has an authority and unity that comes from its divine author.↵
